SPEAKS AT "Y"

French Ex-Premier Gives Interesting Address On Science

Chinese officials buried their Confucian precepts in a whirl of gaiety and joined in giving a picturesque tea dance at the Great Eastern Hotel yesterday in honor of M. Paul Painleve, Expremier of France, scholar and scientist.

The hosts were Mr. Shen Paochang, magistrate of the Shanghai City, Messrs. Nieh Chun-he and Chen Chi-shou, Magistrates of the French Mixed Court and Messrs. S. K. Chen and N. T. Yang, secretaries of the Foreign Bureau.

EVENT COSMOPOLITAN

Beautifully gowned and jewel laiden Chinese maids fox-trotted, one stepped and waltzed with Consular officials, army men and members of the Painleve party, while young Chinese led the foreign lady guests to tread the light fantastic in approved Western style.

The affair was truely brilliant, successful in every way, cosmopolitan and even inspiring. Though never before seen at any ball of any magnitude in Shanghai, the daughters of the Celestial land acquitted themselves gracefully, its sons, gallantly.

There was not a dull moment throughout the program of some 20 numbers, every one of which was enthusiastically applauded and encores were given. Especially conspicuous were the Chinese lady participants, who outnumbered the foreign and Chinese dancers put together. On and on they swung and shuffled to the great delight of the men until the music came to a full stop for the party to pose for a group picture, which brought the afternoon's festivities to a grand finale.

No Personal Animosity Held Against Foreign Office Prisoner Declares

He said that following on his being shot in China he presented a claim against the Chinese government, but the Japanese government "were indifferent to the matter."

Accordingly he thought that "a proper settlement was necessary, for the sake of the national honor."

Nishiyama added that he had no personal animosity against Mr. Saito.

It is reported that Nishiyama claimed over 130,000 yen compensation but the authorities proposed a claim of 7,000 yen.

French Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary Of Republic

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, September 6.—Great enthusiasm prevailed yesterday when the fifteeth anniversary of the proclamation of the French Republic was celebrated in every town and village of France.

At Meaux, the celebration was coupled with that of the anniversary of the victory of the Marne, whilst at Cagny a monument was unveiled in honor of the two French regiments which being hastily sent ahead in a thousand taxicabs, when they unexpectedly fell upon the German right flank and so started the Marne victory.

The newspapers emphasise that the hearty participation of all classes of the population in these celebrations as a token of the perpetuation of the spirit of patriotic solidarity which united the French nation all through the war.

OBREGON TAKES PRESIDENCY OF MEXICO REPUBLIC

Former Guerilla Leader Is Made Successor To Late Executive

LOYAL ARMY BEHIND HIM

Operated In North And Had Many Vicissitudes In Turbulent Times

(Reuter's Service)

Mexico City, September 6.—General Obregon has been elected President of Mexico. He was formerly Minister of War and staged the coup d'etat which led to the overthrow of General Carranza.

A STRONG MAN

General Obregon has for several years been admittedly one of the strongest figures in the muddled affairs of Mexico. His activities were usually in Northern Mexico and he was at various times an independent leader in guerilla warfare and at others a general in command of armies for the government.

With the frequent changes in government and political aspect in Mexico it was difficult to know from day to day which military chiefs might be looked upon as officially in command of a federal force. The rebels of one week were the loyalists of another.

HIS ARMY LOYAL

But throughout the turbulent times Obregon managed to maintain an army that was loyal to himself whether he was for or against the existing government.

Persons familiar with the Mexico situation believe that he probably will prove a strong man in the presidential chair; probably the strongest man since the first Huerta who, like Carranza, the intriguing politician, and Madero the patriotic dreamer, was assassinated.—Ed.

POLES WANT HELP OF LEAGUE TO END LITHUANIAN FIGHT

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 7.—The Polish Government have appealed to the League of Nations requesting mediation in the Polish-Lithuanian dispute and pointing out that an unprovoked attack was made on the Polish troops and that unless an improvement takes place in the situation Poland will be compelled to declare war on Lithuania.

Paris, September 6.—According to a French official statement, 128,000 Bolshevist soldiers have taken refuge in East Prussia.

The Polish Government is dissatisfied with the internment conditions as, it is stated, Bolshevik bands are roaming at large in East Prussia and are even recrossing the frontier, attacking Polish villages and taking refuse again in German territory.

This maneuver, the Poles state, was adopted in the attack on the fortresses of Ossowiec and Suwalki. Poland has requested the Allies to require Germany properly to intern and disarm the refugees.

BRITONS BEGIN FOOD CONTROL AS STRIKE MOVE

Provision Being Made To Relieve Distress If Crisis Arises

GOVERNMENT PREPARES

Partial Stoppage Of Rail Lines Is Part Of Official Program

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 7.—The Government are evidently preparing for the worst in case the miners' leaders prove obdurate, and have begun organising the distribution of food.

In the event of a strike, the Government has in view a partial stoppage of railways and arrangements for the carriage of necessaries by road transport are being made.

This work has been entrusted to three subordinate members of the Ministry and two civil servants. Each has been allotted one of five districts into which the country has been divided for the purpose.

Those Commissioners are now engaged in ascertaining what the position would be in their district in the event of a strike and will report upon the means of relieving the distress that would follow.

REPLIES TO SMILLIE

London, September 5.—With regard to the statement of Mr. Robert Smillie, the miners' leader to the Sunday Times accepting the principle of mediation "by an Impartial Board," Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade, in the course of an interview, said that the government would gladly let the industrial court decide concerning the miners' demand for increased wages and the court, if the miners desired, could include representatives of employes and also of the miners.

Sir Robert Horne said he was of opinion that the Miners' Federation objected to the industrial court, but he pointed out that nearly all the other great trade unions in the country had resorted to it and the court in recent time had proved of great efficacy.

WOULD EFFECT WAGES

Sir Robert Horne added that Mr. Smillie's statement appeared to offer a loophole for an ultimate settlement, even failing reference to the industrial court.

Finally, the minister emphasised that the supreme necessity at present was the production of coal and an increased production would justify a reconsideration of the whole wages question.

WASHINGTON WILL KEEP HANDS OFF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, September 7.—In the absence of Mr. Bainbridge Colby, state department officials today were loath to express an opinion on the action of the Tennessee House of Representatives in voting: Firstly, that the proceedings of August 21 with reference to the women suffrage amendment should be expunged from the official minutes of the house; secondly, that the house refused to concur in the ratification of the suffrage bill by the senate, and, thirdly, that action on the Suffrage Bill should be reconsidered.

It is pointed out that the State Department is not concerned, unless the governor of Tennessee rescinds his certification of ratification by the state legislature, or the courts decide that the ratification is invalid.

STOP MURDERS AND HUNGER STRIKERS MAY BE RELEASED IRISH MALCONTENTS INFORMED

Premier's Ultimatum To Ireland

London, September 7.—It is announced in telegrams from Viege, Switzerland, that Mr. Lloyd George has declared that if a guarantee were given that the murders of police in Ireland would cease he believed that the Government would be prepared to release Mr. McSweeney and other hunger-strikers.

Mr. Lloyd George is reported as adding that telegrams from Ireland proved that the unconditional release of the Lord Mayor would have a disastrous effect on the morale of the Irish police and make the Government of Ireland impossible.

Protect Employers As Well As Employes, Is View Of Senator Harding

Republican Candidate For Presidency Preaches "Gospel Of Understanding" While Cox Drives Race Horse

(Reuter's Service)

New York, September 7.—Electioneering speeches are the order of the day.

Speaking at Marion, Ohio, on Labor Day, Senator Warren Harding preached "the gospel of understanding" between employers and employed. He had always believed in trade unionism and collective bargaining, he said, but he opposed the domination of business by labor as determinedly as he would oppose domination by any other class.

Voluntary arbitration, he considered, was the ideal solution of labor troubles, and he advocated the appointment of committees of employers and employed, not "to run business," but to promote mutual understanding. No one could buy the laborer's right to quit employment, but the adjustment of labor troubles should be on a basis of justice to everyone.

FOR CUMMINS LAW

Senator Harding said he endorsed the Cummins Law restoring the railroads to private operation, but he could not approve "the Socialists' plan, which was to place the railroads under the control of the employes, which meant associated profiteering. Senator Harding declared that "assaults without action" had discredited the Democratic Administration's policy towards profiteering.

In the course of another speech Senator Harding stated that amendment, revision, or reconstruction of the League Covenant was among the possibilities to be considered when the time came to frame a specific program for international peace and the reconstruction of Europe and he wanted the United States to take the lead.

Senator Harding also said that he was determined to guard against the clamor of insincerity and abuse during the campaign.

COX IN MINNESOTA

Governor Cox, is busy making speeches in Minnesota.

At St. Paul, where he visited the State Fair, and drove a racing trotter round the track, amid the cheers of the crowd, Governor Cox, said that the interests of Labor and agriculture would be served by the success of the League of Nations.

He advocated measures to increase farm production and farm acreage and the supply of Labor. He said he favored collective bargaining for Labor. He pledged increased salaries for all Postal employes. In reply to a question, he said he was in favor of the application of self-government in Japan (?) China, Persia, and Turkey.

At Milkwaukee, Governor Cox delivered no less than five speeches. He demanded that Senator Harding should unequivocally state what were his peace plans.

ATTACKS REPUBLICANS

He also continued his attack on the Republican Party for their alleged campaign fund, accusing Chairman Will Hays of "deliberately perpetuating a falsehood under oath" in denying the quota of campaign charges.

Again, at Minneapolis Governor Cox reiterated the charge that the Republicans had appropriated fifteen million dollars to the Campaign Fund.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. Raymond Robins began their stump for Senator Harding at Kansas City today. Both speakers assailed the League of Nations as "a menace to the nation" and criticised the present Administration for alleged "extravagance and blundering."

Mr. Robins declared that the Allied intervention in Russia and Siberia was the result of an attempt to collect the debts of the late Czar's Government to the International bankers. "That blunder," asserted Mr. Robins, "had cost the United States over a hundred million dollars."

GOMPERS FOR DEMOCRATS

Mr. Samuel Gompers, in a Labor Day speech championed the cause of Governor Cox. He said he hoped to see favorable Labor Legislation enacted.

Mr. Gompers defended the League of Nations and criticised Senator Harding, accusing him of "inactivity for everything constructive, and activity for everything reactionary."

Motor Car Bandits Shoot And Rob Victim In Bank

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, September 7.—A sensational robbery and murder of a Japanese civilian occured here this evening.

It appears that a Japanese, a Mr. Kawabata, accompanied by a Japanese army officer entered the Heng-ta Bank, in the Japanese Concession, in order to change dollars into yen, as he intended to leave for Japan tomorrow.

Three Chinese, who had evidently been following in a motor car, drew up at the curb, rushed into the bank and presented revolvers at the two Japanese. The latter attempted to withdraw by the way they had come, when one of the Chinese shot Mr. Kawabata in the body, killing him almost instantaneously.

The assassins then rifled the dead man's pockets, made off, shooting at everyone who crossed the course of their motorcar. They drove in the direction of a village beyond the French Concession.

Chinese mounted police are searching the neighborhood this evening but as yet no arrests have been effected.

U. S. REFUSES TO GO TO AID OF M'SWEENEY

State Department Tells Relative Of Imprisoned Man It Cannot Act Except For Americans

(Reuter's Service)

New York, September 6.—The State Department has sent a letter to Lord Mayor McSweeney's brother saying that it is not in a position to protest to the British authorities against the arrest and imprisonment of one who is not a citizen of the United States.

London, September 5.—Mr. Bonar Law, in his reply to the Labor Party's appeal for the release of the Lord Mayor of Cork, points out that Mr. McSweeney was one of the leaders of the Irish Republican army, which declared itself to be at war with the forces of the Crown, and, according to his own written word in one of the seditious documents, for the possession of which he was convicted, he and his followers were determined to pursue their ends, asking for no mercy and making no compromise.

He was arrested while actively conducting the affairs of a rebel organisation under cover of a Mayoral court.

Had he been taken at his word and dealt with as an avowed rebel, according to the universal practice of civilised nations, he would, in view of the circumstances of his capture, have been liable immediately to be shot. Instead he was tried by a legally constituted tribunal, sentenced to a moderate term of imprisonment and given immediately all the privileges of political prisoners.

DEFIED GOVERNMENT

From the moment of his arrest he sought to defeat the ends of justice and the reduce the forces of the Crown to impotence by refusing food, no doubt in the belief that that course would lead to speedy release.

"It is the clear duty of the government," Mr. Bonar Law continued, "not only to take every step possible to suppress disorder in Ireland but also to protect those brave men, who are carrying on their duty as servants of the Crown in daily peril of their lives. To release prisoners, who, like the Lord Mayor, have been guilty of complicity in a movement, which uses as one of its main instruments assassination and outrage, would be nothing short of betrayal of those loyal officers, on whose devotion to duty the fabric of social order on Ireland rests.

"Since the arrest of the Lord Mayor 15 officers have been brutally and treacherously done to death without even a chance of defending themselves.

"Surely the sympathy which has been given in such full measure to the Lord Mayor, whose condition has been brought about by his own deliberate act, is due rather to the bereaved widows and families of the murdered Irish policemen.

MUST UPHOLD LAW

"The government fully realises how large a part sentiment plays in all human affairs and if it were possible they would gladly have taken the attitude of the King of England who said of his opponent, 'He is determined to make himself a martyr and I am equally determined to prevent it.'

"Greatly as the government sympathise with those who desire to see peace and order restored in Ireland, they cannot take a course, which, as the Prime Minister has said, would lead inevitably to the complete breakdown of the whole machinery of law and government. The policy of the government has been made clear from the outset, and, if the Lord Mayor dies in prison, the responsibility will rest in some degree upon those who, by repeated appeals, encouraged the belief that the government would prove insincere in their determination and the hope that, notwithstanding all declarations to the contrary, his misguided action would lead eventually to release."

UNION MEN IN PROTEST

London, September 6.—The Trade Union Congress passed a resolution declaring its indignation at the Government's decision "to allow the Mayor of Cork to die."

"We, in the name of the whole organised Labor movement," stated the resolution, "will hold the Government responsible for the death of the Lord Mayor and we remind them that such blind stupidity will render reconciliation between Ireland and England almost impossible."

The Congress adjourned until tomorrow without touching the war crisis.

U.S. WATERPOWER TO BE DEVELOPED BY INDIVIDUALS

Government Drops Monopoly And Adopts System Of Personal Leases

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, August 6 (by mail).—Regulations for the administrations of the federal act opening up the country's vast waterpower resources to private development are now being drafted.

As soon as they are completed the waterpower commission, composed of the Secretaries of War, Interior and Agriculture will hold hearings on them. The hearings will be pushed as speedily as possible so that the waterpower legislation, which has been ten years in the making, can be put into effect without undue delay.

Under the waterpower bill the commission is empowered to issue survey permits or licenses for a period not exceeding 50 years. The licenses will pay to the government reasonable annual charges in an amount to be fixed by the commission.

Upon the expiration of any license, the government, if two years' notice in writing has been given by the commission, will have the right to take over and operate [illegible] waterpower development after payment of the net investment of the licensee in the undertaking.

Mexican Army Is Being Reduced To Aid Agriculture

Five Thousand Officers And Men Are Retired From Military Service

(Reuter's Service)

New York, August 6 (by mail).—Advices from Mexico City states that more than 5,000 officers and privates in the Mexican Army retired from military service in the first week of July.

This general withdrawal from the army is the result of a campaign recently launched by the Government to induce a large part of the soldiers of Mexico "to abandon the rifle for the plough," as the Mexican press is fond of phrasing it.

The Government's campaign for a smaller army is due to the realisation that vast tracts of valuable agricultural land are in urgent need of development and that many factories in Mexico are short of hands.

It is pointed out that the present military situation is such as to require the services of not more than 50,000 men, thus permitting the other thousands of men under arms to devote themselves to the task of economically rehabilitating the country.

NEBRASKANS IN FARMERS' UNION

Largest Co-operative Body In United States Is formed By Grangers

(Reuter's Service)

Lincoln, Neb., August 6 (by mail).—What is said to be the largest co-operative organisation of farmers in the United States has just been formed here. It will market the grain of the 40,000 members of the Nebraska Farmers' Union and eliminate middlemen and brokers.

The organisation, known as the National Co-operative company, with a capital authorised at $1,000,000, has 1,500 locals, 300 grain elevators, 50 general stores, three creameries and two flour mills besides nearly 100 shipping associations.

The Union also has live stock commission offices in the yards of Omaha, Sioux City, St. Joseph and Denver, and a big wholesale exchange in Omaha that carries everything from farm implements to groceries to supply its retail stores.

The corporation expects soon to build or lease a big terminal elevator in Lincoln or Omaha, and negotiations are in progress for seats on the Lincoln and the Omaha grain exchanges.

A regular commission business will be conducted for local companies participating and net profits will be pro-rated on the basis of business done, after the company pays eight percent dividend on its stock.

CHOLERA CASES ARE RECORDED

Mortality In Shanghai Shows Increase For Month, Report Shows

During August there was an increased mortality as compared with the abnormally low mortality of July but scarcely above the normal for August, according to the current Municipal Gazette.

Continuing the Municipal Gazette says, "The Chinese press reported epidemics from choleraic diarrhoea from many parts of China, with a high mortality; but generally, except in Szechuen province, the mortality was less than last year and this was markedly so in the Shanghai Foreign Settlement where there is a distinct factor of immunity both among foreigners and Chinese attributable to general sanitation and some measure of health education among both foreign and Chinese communities.

"The Joint Council on Public Health Education of the Medical Missionary Association and the China National Medical Association are usefully developing for the rest of China the issue of health notices and booklets initiated by the Municipal Health Office.

"The Chinese Y.M.C.A. boys conducted a most praiseworthy, useful and much appreciated effort toward reaching the Chinese people in the Settlement the special dangers from flies, rats, refuse and infected food—fundamentals of local sanitation. By means of a procession carrying models they drew special attention to the objects of their movement, and this was followed by lantern demonstrations in the markets and open air lectures and talks, which cannot but have had very good results. Previous to this the same boys had shown what they could do within a given area in getting people to clean up the immediate surroundings of their houses.

Intestinal diseases were very prevalent throughout the month, especially dysentery of a severe type and choleraic diarrhœa, in 16 cases of which, occurring within the Settlement, true cholera vibrios were found.

The Red Cross Cholera Hospital, the newly opened Infectious Diseases Hospital and St. Luke's Hospital did good work, especially by giving saline transfusion treatment in severe cases, practically relieving the Municipal Isolation Hospital of attention to these cases. Special attention was given by the sanitary staff to food inspection and a large number of notices, calling attention to the main dangers and showing how they could be avoided, were posted and explained by talks at the Branch Health Offices and other suitable places."

Intoxicated Hogs Reveal Moonshine Still In Kentucky

(Reuter's Service)

Whitesburg, Ky., August 6 (by mail).—A drove of intoxicated hogs gave prohibition officers the clue that led to seizure of a giant still and arrest of two men in Letcher County, Ky.

The hogs, according to one of the prohibition enforcers, were found on top of a mountain and were "cutting weird capers." A search and discovery of the still followed.

Taikoo Withdraws From Combine And Reduces Its Rates

30 Percent Cut Off To Compete With Other Yangtsze Plying Steamers

To announce its severance of relations with the Yangtsze River Steamer Rates Syndicate, the China Navigation Company, for whom Messrs. Butterfield and Swire are Agents, has reduced its passenger rates by 30 percent. Compadores of the various Taikoo steamers which ply between the Yangtsze ports are extensively advertising their withdrawal from the combine and the news of their reduction.

The syndicate, it is understand, will soon undergo a reorganisation to cope with the new situation created by Taikoo's withdrawal. Officials of the combine are however confident that the withdrawal will make little or no difference to the combine so long as the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, the senior member of the combine, remains within its fold.

Women Orators Rallying To Their Party Standards

Even Old Time Politicians Admit Male Spell-binders Must Look To Their Laurels---How Some Famous Feminine Speakers Line Up

New York, July 25.—Of suffrage campaigning the woman orator was born. Political vote gathering this year will provide the opportunity for her highest development in this art.

Many delegates to the recent political conventions, who represented, in fact, defeated candidates for various public offices in times gone by, heard with envy the brilliant women speakers who eulogized those long and often tedious sessions.

"My! If I could talk with a punch like that woman I'd own the earth," commented a man who was among the "also rans" in his State elections, as Mrs. Douglas Robinson finished her famous nominating speech at Chicago in a burst of deafening approval.

"How do they do it?" questioned another disgruntled delegate.

"Guess it's natural to the sex, talkin' is," ventured his consoling friend.

No woman would deny this man's claim, but women orators know there is a wide difference between talkers and speakers. Even old time politicians have been known to admit that the talkers in their parties were many and the orators few. And what is the reason, these men are asking, comparing their own deficiencies in the oratorical line with the tremendously successful women political speakers.

WOMAN'S DRAMATIC SENSE

"Women have a dramatic sense, which most men lack," a noted suffrage leader once remarked, discussing this subject. And the National Woman's Party, which Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and others organized, operated their campaigns largely on this basis, giving their work a dramatic and picturesque turn. Of course Mrs. Pankhurst, the most dramatic of all campaigners, never claimed a copyright on her methods, and some of the milder ones which the National Woman's Party introduced here, such as picketing the White House and "storming" the Capitol with oratory and flags, got across big in the press of the country.

It has been said that women are much more tense than men in any hobby or interest they may take up, and this may answer, in part, the sad eyed politician's personal introspection of his failure at the polls.

Even the most conservative politician—the Rip Van Wingle of modern political life, whose tradition bound mind has worked to oppose women's political enfranchisement, is now as quick to admit this new and powerful influence in campaigning as their more aggressive brethren.

So for the first time in this limited democracy of ours we have the spectacle of the national parties eagerly inviting the participation of women in their councils, and the more difficult work of campaigning for their choice for President.

Women have rallied astonishingly well to their favorite party's call and headquarters of both the Republican and Democratic parties are busy at work classifying lists of well known women speakers, who will help to carry their particular propaganda to the "uncertain" voter.

CLASSIFYING THE TALENT

At the Republican national headquarters in New York, Mrs. Charlotte Farrar, organiser of the women's speakers bureau, is listing the women orators of the party in a most methodical fashion. They will be classed as A, B, and C. For instance, as Mrs. Farrar pointed out, women will be listed according to their talents and capacity for holding various audiences. The woman with a big personality and a voice to match will be assigned to speak to large gatherings, while other speakers whose qualities of voice lack the carrying capacity of a Carnegie Hall or a Hippodrome will be assigned to smaller meetings held in schools or drawing rooms. Then there is another class of orators, perhaps the most important of all, as many suffragists seem to think, judging from their own experience, and these are the soap-box orators.

To be an accomplished street corner speaker one must possess a sense of humor, it is pointed out by the experts. This enables a speaker to quickly meet the taunts or flippant comments of unfriendly members of a mob. In this trick many women speakers have became past masters.

To do this properly, and turn the laugh on the jeerer, one must know his subject thoroughly; and was there ever a man who could talk suffrage as women talked it! "They couldn't," a woman would explain, "because they did not feel the same interest."

Schools of instruction are under way at the various campaign headquarters. One of these has been in existence for some weeks at the State Republican headquarters, in West Thirty-ninth street. It was organised under the supervision of Mrs. Arthur Livermore, chairman of the Women's State Republican committee.

Mrs. Livermore herself is one of the ablest speakers in the country. She has a personality and a quick wit which carry her audience, and, as her suffrage work showed, she always got results.

Instruction will be confined to the less experienced campaign workers, for instance, to such work as house to house canvassing or addressing small community meetings. Familiarity with the party planks will form a part of this instruction. As one well known Republican woman remarked, her woman helpers could, with interest to every man, woman and child, find an interesting hour's discourse on the vital subjects of "How to Live Within One's Income," with the present Administration indifferent to the appeals of the people to do something to regulate the soaring prices asked by profiteers. They might, she said, refer to England, where the greedily inclined merchant was curbed, during the war, in any intention he might have of making a fortune out of the unfortunates of war, by timely action on the part of the Government, which regulated price of necessities of life. No doubt this is a question that will receive no little attention from both the woman orators in this campaign and the audiences they speak to.

"CANNED" SPEECHES

Another subject that will be much discussed during the hotly waged campaign will revolve around the huge expenditures and vast extravagances by the present Administration. One woman leader said: "Hoover taught us to conserve food during the world need; we women of the country now must insist upon the Government conserving the taxpayer's money."

A new note in campaigning will be introduced by the "canned" speeches now being prepared. A new device attached to these graphophone records will help to strengthen and carry the speaking voice. Mrs. Farrar pointed out these can be utilised at rallies, political picnics and at gatherings in small or remote sections where it will be impossible for one of the big "stars" to appear.

The first of these five minute speeches which has just been tried out with success has been done by Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and conceded by both men and women to be America's foremost woman orator.

Mrs. Robinson has a personality that seems to invite the individual attention and interest of every member of her audience. Like her famous brother, her words carry conviction, for there is a ring of earnestness about her well and simple formed phrases that her most scornful political opponent could not deny. Listening to her one feels the belief that back of her words are her convictions there is no self-seeking object to be obtained.

A speaker of national reputation who will devote some of this talent to her own candidacy for Congress on the Democratic ticket is Dr. Esther Lovejoy of Portland, Ore.

Dr. Lovejoy is well known in New York, where she passes a part of her time in the interests of the Medical Women's National Association, of which she is president. Dr. Lovejoy has had a unique speaking record, for her work has touched on a number of sujects, including those of Portland's first milk ordinance and systematic medical inspection of school children, while she was head of the Portland Board of Health. During the war she was sent to France by the Medical Women's National Association to make a survey of the work of helping the women and children of that country. Later under the Red Cross she made a countrywide speaking tour here.

"I make it a point to never speak at length, or until people begin to grow weary of listening," said Dr. Lovejoy. "The most entertaining voice will become monotonous if it continues until people get tired sitting. Short speeches are always best, for if nothing else, they at least win the gratitude of an audience. I regard Dr. Anna Shaw as the greatest woman orator of our day. She never talked her audience tired. She had a sense of humor besides, and she always sent her audience home in high spirits with something to think of afterward. Dr. Shaw was a religious woman, and I think a religious fervor always showed in her suffrage talks. Everything, good or bad, is backed by emotion, and this fervor a good woman feels in taking up a cause communicates itself to one's audience. One must feel deeply to impress others. A cold, defective nature, no matter how educated a person may be or what choice of words he uses to express himself, lacks the power to inspire others."

One of the best known women speakers in the Democratic party, whose talents in this direction became better known during the splendid war work she did for France in this country as one of their active members of the Fund for French Wounded, is Miss Elisabth Marbury, now a member of the National Democratic Committee. Aside from a political speaker of no mean ability Miss Marbury is a favorite after dinner speaker.

One of the best known women orators of the West, whose voice will be heard much in the Republican campaign, is Mrs. Robert Burdette, widow of the famous humorist of California.

That women themselves are not without humor the public will be convinced during the campaign, when many women orators who can tell a story and let the point of it sink in are put in class A, right at the top of the list.

One of these is Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton of Ohio, who after many years of campaigning for suffrage now assumes the part in political life which she has for so long advocated for women. She has been made a member of the National Executive Republican Committee.

Mrs. Katherine P. Edson, another member of the National Republican Committee, will play a big part in the campaign as one of the party's most brilliant speakers in her own home State of California as well as the other coast States.

In fact the Far West has produced much oratorical talent among women, perhaps due to the fact that a number of these States have had voting women for many years. Mrs. Josephine Corliss Preston, an ardent Republican and president of the National Education Association, is one of the favorite women spell-binders of the Pacific coast. She is Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Washington, and because of her broad experience in public work she is an interesting talker as well.

SPEAKERS FOR THE SOUTH

In the South the Republican party's list of women speakers will be headed by Mrs. John Glover South of Kentucky. Mrs. South is a cousin of the newly elected Republican Governor of Kentucky, Edwin P. Morrow. Mrs. South is a member of the Republican National Committee, and, like Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago, she inherited some fine political qualities and tastes from her father, William C. Bradley, who was twice Governor of Kentucky, a member of Congress and always interested in his party's success.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, it will be remembered, is the daughter of the late Mark Hanna, the well known political "boss." Mrs. McCormick, long interested in suffrage, will be an active participant in the affairs this year of her father's party for, like her Senator husband, he is an enthusiastic believer in the principles of democracy as interpreted by the Republican party.

Good looks is always an undisputed asset in either a man or woman speaker, and when to this asset are added a well developed mind and pleasing personality the combination puts one in the very first ranks of favorite platform speakers. Such is the rare combination enjoyed by Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns of Chicago. She has used her talent for some time in helping to perfect and build up a strong organisation of Republican women in her home State.

"Women," she says in support of her successful work, "have learned well the value of organisation. Through our long service as club women we know that while anything is possible when individuals are united toward a woman purpose nothing in the world can be accomplished by sporadic effort.

"A political party is no better than its members. If we as men and women wish to have a voice in choosing a party candidate we must use the ballot of that party and accept our responsibilities. To work from within is more effective than to work from without."

All the women who spoke for the first time in national conventions this year, seconding the nomination of their favorite candidates for the office of President and Vice-President, will enter the ranks of spell-binders for their respective party's campaign. Among this number are Mrs. Izella Brown, delegate to the Democratic Convention from West Virginia, who seconded the nomination of John W. Davis; Miss Helen Boswell, who wanted to see Dr. Butler made President; Alexandra Carlisle of Massachusetts, who made the seconding speech for Coolidge; Mrs. John W. Morrison of Chicago, who wanted Herbert Hoover nominated for President, and many other women equally at home on the speakers' platform.

Side by side in most all the meetings and public gatherings during the campaign men and women will share the acclaim usually accorded to lively campaign speakres.

Monaco Finds Fish Carrying Lantern

Paris, July 17.—The Prince of Monaco has added another name to his long list of marine discoveries, the latest being a deep sea fish known as the cephalopode, which carries two luminous protuberances, like electric lamps, on his back to light his way in the darkest depths of the ocean.

The Prince's cephalopode, unlike others heretofore known, is black and has a peculiar ability to recharge his lamps when extreme pressure of water has decreased their lighting power. The Prince has presented photographs of the fish and scientific data to the French Academy of Sciences, but was unable to present a living specimen, owing to the fact that they cannot be kept alive in water of ordinary depth.

SUFFRAGISTS ARE FOR GOV. COX

Say That Harding Has been Evasive And Noncommittal On Their Cause

OTHER LEADER FRIENDLY

Woman's Party Admits Both Have Been Loyal Since Nominated

Washington, July 10.—Comparison of the records of Governor Cox, the Democratic Presidential candidate, and Senator Harding, the Republican nominee, upon the matter of woman suffrage is made by the National Woman's Party in a statement issued tonight.

According to the two records, Senator Harding shows up at a great disadvantage in the eyes of the suffragists besides Governor Cox. The suffragists say that Senator Harding's record was "varied, evasive and non-committal," until the Autumn of 1919, when he voted for the Federal amendment. His suffrage record since that time indicates, they say, that he has been lukewarm upon the subject.

On the other hand, Governor Cox is declared to have "shown a favorable attitude from the first." Suffragists say that the Governor has been willing to meet their suggestions and that he has shown "marked interest" in the Federal amendment. Deputations "have always been assured of his support," when the resolution should come up in the Ohio Legislature, the suffragists assert.

The statement by the National Woman's Party follows:

"Since their nomination both Senator Harding, Republican Presidential candidate, and Governor Cox, Democratic Presidential candidate, have taken a stand favoring suffrage.

"Their records and the various steps that have finally led them to take this favorable stand are to be found at the Woman's Party headquarters.

"Senator Harding's suffrage record was varied, evasive and noncommital until the Autumn of 1919 when, on October 1, he cast his first vote for the Nineteenth Amendment.

"As early as June 24, 1915, deputations from the Woman's Party began calling on him to ask his stand on the question of political freedom for women. Then he said:

"'Believing as I do in political parties I had much rather that the party to which I belong should, in its conference, make a declaration, than to assume a leadership or take an individual position on the question.'

"On January 20, 1916, when asked a similar question he said he did not see how he 'could vote for suffrage and against prohibition.' He thought he would vote against the amendment.

"In June, 1916, Senator Harding made the keynote speech at the Republican National Convention in Chicago. Before he spoke he was interviewed by members of the Woman Party and asked to mention suffrage in his address, recognising it as one of the most important issues before the country. He said he had not decided upon everything in his speech, that there would be time to add the suffrage issue to his address, and that he would consider it. But the speech was made with no mention of suffrage in it.

"On November 11, 1916, when interviewed by a member of the Woman's Party, he said he was inclined to leave the solution of the question to his party. He thought it would be presumptuous for him to dictate to his party. He was not interested.

"On April 26, 1917, he declared himself favorable to the amendment, but it did not appeal to him as a war measure.

"On July 19 of the same year he said he did not approve of jailing the suffragists; that the President could put through the measure if he would, and that he might vote for the amendment.

"On August 2, 1917, he said he could not do anything to support the amendment, but he sympathised with those working for it.

"February 18, 1918, he said he 'deprecated a too rapid advance of democracy and consequently would hold back on woman suffrage.'

"But on October 1, 1918, Senator Harding had emerged from the mist of non-committal atmosphere and voted for the amendment. He also voted for it in February and in June of the next year when it passed Congress.

"Governor Cox, who has three times been Governor of his State, had left Congress when the National Woman's Party was organised, in 1913.

'Consequently his part in the passage of the amendment could not be so active, since he had no vote to cast. But his influence in gaining the Senatorial votes of his State and in legislative measures was consequently sought.

"From the first he has shown a favorable attitude and has been willing to meet the suggestions made him by the women to whom he has given audience on the subject.

"June 18, 1917, he gave an interview to a representative of the Woman's Party and discussed in detail with her the militant movement of suffrage, showing a marked interest and speaking favorably of the amendment.

"At the time of the Democratic Convention in June, 1916, in St. Louis, he announced to a deputation from the Woman's Party that he would do what he could for suffrage at the convention and that he stood for the measure.

"During the period of ratification, deputations have called on the Governor several times and have always been assured of his support of the amendment when the resolution should come up in the Legislature.

"When Governor Burnquist of Minnesota wired him asking his position on Ohio's ratifying the measure, he wired:

"'Ohio Legislature now in recess; will convene June 16. It is my judgment that the Legislature will ratify.'

"And Ohio did ratify the amendment on June 16, being the fourth State on the suffrage roll.

"On the day following his nomination, he took a step that won the approval of all suffragists, when he wired the Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Louisiana, whose Legislature, then in session, already had defeated the amendment:

"'It is a duty the Legislature of Louisiana owes to the Democratic Party to ratify at once.'"

The comparison of the records of the two candidates was compiled by the Legislative Department of the National Woman's Party.

Anglo-American Season At Deauville

Deauville, Northern France, July 17.—With hopes running high for a bright season, this elegant watering place is rapidly filling up. Already many hotels have put up "full house" signs, and practically no furnished villas or flats are to be had except at frightfully exorbitant prices.

This season will be known as the Anglo-American season on account of the numerous people from Britain and the United States, who are here now or are coming. The Casino is in full swing, while the beach presents the most animated scene every day.

New Yorkers Guest Of British Noblemen

London, July 7.—Visitors from the United States are arriving at an average rate of 9,000 a week, the Daily Mail reports, quoting one of the latest comers at the Ritz Hotel as saying:

"Here I am, surrounded by New Yorkers who came over with me in the boat. I knew most of them in the United States and I want to get away from the American atmosphere as much as possible while in England. I want a change. I am going to accept Lord—'s invitation to spend a fortnight at his country house."

Many members of the House of Lords have in fact undertaken to entertain American and British overseas visitors from now till the end of October, giving them just the kind of holiday they would choose. House parties are being arranged for them to widen their circle of English acquaintances. They are being elected temporary members of West End clubs and of golf clubs when recreation is needed.

Picturesque Costumes Worn At Ascot Races

Ascot, England, July 7.—As usual, the most fashionable women attended the "Royal Ascot" races and, of course there was a remarkable exhibition of gowns, hats and other feminine paraphernalia. Perhaps the most striking garment seen at the track was a lace cloak made in three overlapping flounces reaching from the neck to the hem of the gown, which was of modish length—nearly to the boot tops. A feature of this costume was a hat of lace made over velvet.

No little amusement was caused by the small parasols carried by the ultra-smart set. In some cases the miniature sunshades were smaller than the hat.

The train stopped in a siding, whereupon Kalmikoff seized a revolver from the officer in charge of the guard, shot the officer in the body and rushed off. The soldiers of the guard fired on Kalmikoff, killing him instantly.

U.S. Team Excels In Clay-Target Events But Fails At Running Deer

Counting three points for first place, two points for second place and one point for third place the following results were obtained:

Norway—First in all four of the deer shooting contests; tied for second place in one individual event and placed third in another Total—14½ points.

United States—First, second and third places in the individual clay target contest: first in the clay target team, and third in the team single shots at the running deer—Total—10 points.

Sweden—Two second places and one tie for second place in the deer shooting, and one third place in the clay target shooting—Total 6½ points.

Finland—One second place and one third place in the running deer shooting—Total—3 points.

Belgium—One second in the clay target—Total—2 points.

The American trapshooting team will make a tour of the battlefields before sailing homeward about August 4.

U.S. GUNNERS GET MEDALS

Antwerp, July 28.—American trapshooters today received their Olympic medals. At the ceremony incident to the presentation there was no hint of a protest against the Americans on the grounds of professionalism, which it was stated in L'Etoile Belge yesterday might be made.

Captain Jay Clarke of the American team, quested on the subject, said: "We left some of our best American shooters at home just to guard against any hint of professionalism."

The American "deer" shooters went to the Beverloo camp tonight to join the rifle team. Lieutenant James Jackson of the Marine Corps today took the place of Commander Osburn on the deer shooting team. Otherwise the lineup remains the same.

NEW RECORD SET ON GRAND CIRCUIT

Rifle Grenade Covers Mile In 2:04¼ In 3-Year-Old Pace—Murphy Wins Two

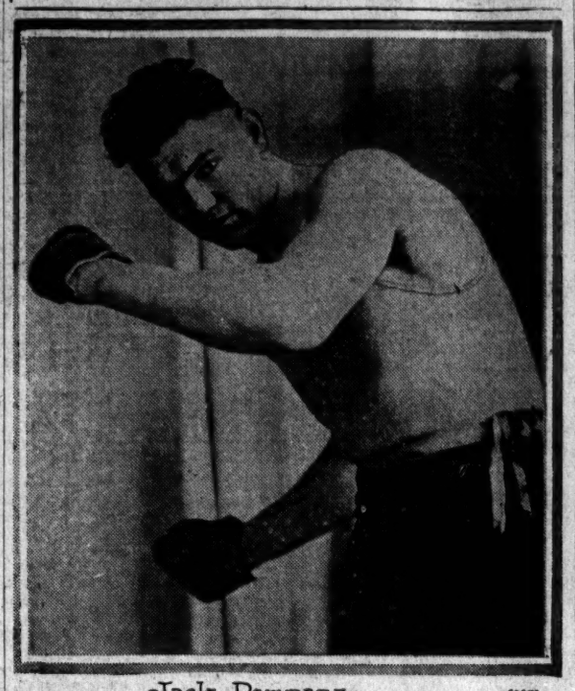
Columbus, Ohio, July 28.—One world's record was broken here this afternoon, when Rifle Grenade, the champion 3-year-old pacing gelding while winning the American Association Trotting Horse Breeders' purse of $2,500 for 3-year-olds, paced the second heat in 2:04¼, lowering his own world's record a second and a half. He was a prohibitive and barred in the betting.

The program was made up entirely of pacing events, the biggest feature being the C. T. Dunkle 2:08 pace, purse $3,000. There were but four starters and Symbol S. Forrest won after dropping the second heat to Dan Early. The final heat was a sizzling one, the victory of Symbol S. Forrest being attained right at the wire. Calgary Earl led to the half in this final heat in 1:01¼ but he tired badly coming home and finished fourth. Symbol S. Forrest was the original favorite, selling for $100 to $190 for the field.

The 2:07 pace was won by Ethel Chimes after she dropped the first heat to Drift Patch. This gave Murphy two victories for the day.

The final race, the 2:12 pace, had Prosser as the auction favorite. He was in a spill in the first heat with Joe McKay and both horses were unplaced on account of the unavoidable accident. Mr. Geers, behind Prosser, went down when Joe McKay tramped into his sulky wheel but he was not injured. Prosser did not do well and failed to go on and win for his backers. Senator Wilkes won the race after losing the first heat to Baron Russell.

Miske Knocked Out In Third Round By Dempsey



Jack Dempsey.

(Reuter's Service)

Benton Harbor, Mich., September 6.—Jack Dempsey knocked out Miske in the third round of a boxing contest here today. There were 17,000 spectators and the gate receipts exceeded $150,000.

(American Consular Radio)

Benton Harbor, Michigan, Sept. 7.—Three hard smashes which sent Billy Miske down for the count prevented the heavyweight title from changing hands in the big Labor Day championship ten-round fight.

As a result of his fistic victory, Dempsey wins between $50,000 and $100,000. He was to receive fifty percent of the gate receipts.

As the Michigan law does not permit a decision in pugilistic bouts, the title could be transferred only by a knockout or by disqualification of the champion for violating a rule.

Both men seemed to be in the pink of condition at the beginning of the battle, Dempsey's ringside weight being 187 pounds and Miske's 180.

A morning drizzle followed by a hot sun turned the great sand pit arena into a steaming vapor bath.

Story Is Denied That Cubs Will Be Sold By Wrigley

Chicago, August 9.—William Veeck, president of the Chicago National League baseball club, today sent word from New York, where he is traveling with the Cubs, that there is no truth in the report that the club will be sold. It had been reported that Frank Chance, former manager of the Cubs; Barney Oldfield, noted race driver; C. W. Murphy, former president of the team, and Cliff Durant, millionaire race driver, had practically completed arrangements to purchase the controlling interest from William Wrigley Jr.

Giants Will Get Roger Hornsby, Is Report

New York, August 9.—The report is current here today that the New York National League baseball club will have Roger Hornsby on its team within another week. The deal, as told by a reliable baseball personage, is that New York will give Pitcher Barnes, Outfielder Young, Catcher McCarthy and Infielder Larry Doyle for the Cardinal star.

The fact that Catcher McCarthy has already been turned over to the St. Louis outfit and is with them in Boston makes the reports seem even more reliable.

SOME 'FIND' FOR RED SOX

Boston, July 24.—"Al" Clayton of Dayton, O., who is 6 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 215 pounds, has been added to the Red Sox pitching staff. Ed Barrow, manager of the Red Sox, received word today that the young giant, who has been playing with a semi-professional team in his home city, had been signed up by Holley, scout of the Boston Americans, and would report to the team at Cleveland next Wednesday.

Clayton is twenty-one years old and has not lost a game in two years, it is reported. His most recent accomplishment was the winning of four games in one week. In a throwing match a short time ago Clayton hurled a baseball 397 feet.

Cobb's 'Hunch' Cost Yankees Dearly

A "hunch," played by Tyrus Reymond Cobb, won a ball game for the Tigers in New York, early in July.

Cobb rejoined the Detroit team that day after a lay-off of six weeks as a result of an injury. He was still lame and, although he had not expected to play any baseball for another week, he donned a uniform and took practise.

When the game began Cobb went to the clubhouse and peeled off his baseball duds. Attired in his "civies" he viewed the game until the end of the sixth inning from a seat in the grandstand.

Then the "hunch" struck him. The score was 2 to 1 in favor of the Yankees in the sixth. Cobb had an idea he might be needed as a pinch-hitter, so he went back to the clubhouse, put on his uniform again and strolled across the field unnoticed just before the eighth inning.

The "hunch" was therefore responsible for Cobb being on the bench to respond to Jennings's cry for help in the ninth. His single sent over the tying run.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."
J. S. ALEXANDER, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Have used your Castoria on various occasions in suitable cases and have found it a palatable and effe ent laxative, especially in the various diseases of childhood."
CHAS. EDWARD GARDINER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Castoria is good for children and I frequen ly prescribe it, and always obtain the desired result."
F. OSWALD BLATTNER, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have prescribed Castoria to families for several years. It is all right. Mothers like it, for children will take it without any trouble."
C. A. WILSON, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Detective And Mystery Stories

The Prairie Mother. By Arthur Stringer. Illustrated by Arthur E. Beecher. Indianapolis. The Bobbs-Merrill Company. $2.00.

It may be well to state at the outset that, although this romance has its setting on a prairie ranch in Northwest Canada, it has nothing in common with the usual Western adventure tale. The reader will look in vain for the familiar types: The girl who rides and shoots, the rival lovers, etc. Furthermore, Mr. Stringer very early in the book develops an unusual domestic situation. The outcome might be guessed at, but the guess would as likely be wrong as right. The principal characters are four: Duncan Argyle McKail of Casa Grande Ranch; his wife, Chaddie; his English cousin, Lady Alicia Elizabeth Newland, and Peter Ketley. The story is told in the form of a diary kept by Chaddie, which begins soon after the birth of her third child. The two other children were twins, and with their coming, McKail had transferred the valuable Casa Grande Ranch to his wife's name. Later he had speculated in land and had not only lost his own capital, but also £7,000 intrusted to him by Lady Alicia for investment. Discussing the disaster with his wife, McKail remarks:

"But there's one thing I want you to remember. If I got deeper into this game than I should have, it wasn't for what money meant to me. I've never been able to forget what I took you away from. I took you away from luxury and carted you out here to the end of Nowhere and had you leave behind about everything that made life decent. And one thing I've always wanted to do is make good on that overdraft on your bank account of happiness. I've wanted to give back to you the things you sacrificed. I knew I owed you that, all along. And when the children came I saw that I owed it to you more than ever. I want to give Dinky-Dink and Poppsy and Pee-Wee a fair chance in life. I want to be able to start them right, just as much as you do. And you can't be dumped back into a three-roomed wickiup, with three children to bring up, and feel that you're doing the right thing by your family.

"The things that make life decent, [she replied] are the things that we carry away in our own immortal soul. The homely old things, like honesty and self-respect and contentment of mind. And if we've got to cut close to the bone, before we can square up our ledger of life, let's start the carving while we have the chance. Let's get our conscience clear and know we're playing the game."

Lady Alicia had announced her intention of coming for the Winter to try the Canadian climate. Chaddie insisted that Casa Grande be handed over to her, "bag and baggage," as representing her investmnt. "I'm the wife of a rancher who went bust in a land-boom and is compelled to start life over again." According the McKails migrate to the run-down Harris ranch, and start anew. Lady Alicia arrives with her English maid and eleven trunks and takes possession of Casa Grande. She also takes possession of McKail; an estrangement between him and his wife follows. Comes into the picture and into Chaddie's life Peter Ketley, a young man from the East—splendid type. From this imperfect outline it will be seen that the author has set the stage for actions which bode good or ill for four people.

The turnings of the plot must be left to the reader's discovery and enjoyment. Mr. Stringer's public is accustomed to expect good work from his pen and we venture the opinion that in "The Prairie Mother" he has surpassed himself. In Chaddie McKail, with her saving pride, her courage and loyalty, and her inflexible will toward the right, he has drawn an appealing portrait.

OUR PETER

Our Peter. By George Woden. New York: E. P. Dutton and Co.

Mr. Woden is the author of one previous novel, "Little Houses," which appeared last year and won considerable praise from the critics of both England and the United States. He is one of the younger group of English novelists who are realists in their intimate study of locality and of character, but who endeavor to infuse their realism with a certain amount of action, of story, even of romance, if they can find a warrant for such bravery of literary method in their scheme. In this new story, as in the former one, Mr. Woden finds his setting in a manufacturing town in the North of England, while the action is carried over a number of years in which his principal characters advance from childhood to maturity. The reader watches the development of their natures and their fates as he follows their growth from year to year. As the picture moves on slowly before his eyes the conviction grips him that this is a true and accurate picture of life, painted with sincerity and with a high and serious purpose.

The picture takes in all phases of the life of an English small city and surrounding countryside and has a wholeness of effect, a sense of largeness, not always to be found in realistic novels. Political contests, clubs and opinions have a part in the picture, and social activities, the doings of school and of church, flower shows and amateur theatricals, picnics and poaching, the industrial life of the place, all help to background the drama of personal development and personal relations that stands out prominently and holds the reader's attention. There is a great company of characters, each one of whom is pointed with care and made to reveal a distinct individuality. They all ring true. Peter, the central character, around whom the whole story revolves and who gives it its title, is a sturdy, upstanding young Englishman, of the breed that has made England the nation she is, son of a mill foreman and himself filling only a humble place in life, but always to be depended on. His friend Hilary of the artistic temperament and the unstable temperament, is strongly contrasted. The story is as English and as honest as roast beef and Yorkshire pudding.

BOOK OF SUSAN

The Book Of Susan. By Lee Wilson Dodd. New York: E. P. Dutton and Co.

A man who made it a practice to read the notices on book wrappers would acquire a great mass of extremely interesting, if wholly inaccurate, information. For one thing, he would come to believe that the fiction world is generously inhabited by "living, breathing men and women." Almost every book wrapper carries on it a guarantee of the lifelike nature of the characters contained within. Now, as a matter of fact, we know that the book wrapper consistently, if not maliciously, twists the truth to its own ends. The really live creatures in the land of fiction form a scanty company in the midst of an enormous and ever-growing population of dummies. These dummies perform their functions with the same air of automatic regularity as is exhibited by the animals on a merry-go-round. We are sure they will run true to form; they are denied that glorious inconsistency which is the divine right of every human being.

Now, "The Book of Susan" came to us without a wrapper, so we were unable to tell at a glance what manner of people were supposed to inhabit it. As we read the book we became conscious of a gradually growing sensation of pleasure. The dummies were absent! It is a fact—the people in this narrative are the genuine variety.

The character of Susan is a well rounded one; she does not exist by reason of a single eccentricity or through a few emotions. She is complex, as every self-respecting person should be, but none the less we feel we know her. And, knowing her, we love her. She really is an extraordinary young woman—the product of two environments. A sensitive, imaginative child, she was born, by some freak of natural law, of a brutal father in squalid surroundings. On Birch Street she met life at its worst and evolved at an early age a defensive strategy and a practical philosophy suited to her circumstances. After fourteen years of this life she suddenly finds herself in a new home in the midst of luxury and in contact with the culture of an unknown world. She learns her new lessons, but she does not forget her old ones. On Birch Street she had learned to look the facts of life square in the face, and the softening influence of Hillhouse Avenue does not destroy her honesty with herself. She is the victim of no half-values; she knows both sides of the fabric.

We are not surprised that the story finds its conclusion in the midst of war. So many stories have done this of late that we have almost come to expect it. However, there is very little of the war after all, and the tale moves swiftly to its close.

There is nothing commonplace about "The Book of Susan." Mr. Dodd writes in a fresh, entertaining style and has shaped his materials with no little skill. Like most good things, it is not equally good in all places, but it possesses that air of versimilitude which always makes the romantic reader wonder if, after all, the tale is not true.

NEXT-BESTERS

Next-Besters. By Lulah Ragsdale. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.75.

Robert Lee Poindexter—"The Boss"—was of the old South, the courtly and sweetnatured master of the ancient and impoverished plantation of Cherokee in Mississippi. But Pat and Polly, the Misses Piondexter, were very modern, up-and-coming young people, who shouldered both hard work and responsibility and evolved an energetic philosophy, though Patricia was only twenty and Polly was just eighteen. The story of their work and responsibility, and of how their philosophy resulted in action, is the story of "Next-Besters," a pretty and amusing little story that is always entertaining, and not without charm.

The aristocratic Poindexters had always "been used to the best." But what with the boll weevil and hard times and the unbusinesslike qualities of the lovable "Boss," the Poindexters had not been able to afford "the best," for a long, long time. So Pat and Polly worked out their philosophy of the "next-besters:" if they couldn't have the best, they would take the next best, and be happy with it. They were all very frank and very brave about their poverty, and very devoted to each other. And Pat and Polly cooked and swept and sewed and went without things, and loved their dear old father with all their hearts.

So much for the "Next-Besters" themselves. The story begins with the invitation and the present that sent Pat to visit a former neighbor in New York. Mrs. Melodia Dent was very rich. In her young days in Mississippi the Poindexters had been very rich, too, and Cherokee renowned for its luxury, elegance and hospitality. Patricia was too proud to confess her father's apparent failure to these kind but worldly folk. Presented with a reputation for Southern ease, indolence and wealth there seemed nothing to do but try to live up to it. And that was easy enough until two of her New York acquaintances returned her visit. "They say wealth brings cares, but I'm sure pretended wealth brings more," mourned Patricia then.

How the family reputation for elegance and ease remained unsoiled, how the victory of Pat and Polly's schemes brought suffering in its wake, how the situation was saved in the end—all this makes a story frankly sentimental, quite "improbable," yet full of sweetness, touched with sincere feeling, and by no means devoid of actual humor. Northern ideas of what Southerners ought to be like and gay Southern attempts to meet these idyllic pictures are well presented and bright. And the double love story of the book is a pretty bit of romance. Assuredly, "Next-Besters" is a pleasant piece of "light reading" for a Summer day.

PAX

Pax. By Lorenze Marroquin. Brentano's.

The practice of issuing translations of Spanish-American novels is one to be heartily commended. For the majority of the inhabitants of the United States are woefully ignorant of the customs, traditions and point of view of the dwellers in the southern portion of the American continent, and, with the exception of direct personal association, there is no better way of becoming acquainted with a people and with their habits of thought than by reading the best of their fiction. Lorenzo Marroquin's novel "Pax" takes us to the Republic of Colombia, and especially to the City of Bogota, in which a great deal of the action of the tale is laid. We attend dinner parties, horse races, balls and the opera with the various characters, journey through the country, and see a large amount of the political intriguing and the political treachery which culminate in the attempted revolution and in the fighting which is the climax of the book.

"Pax" is primarity a war novel, and its best scenes are laid upon the battlefield and invaded or just evacuated districts. Had it been published a few years ago these scenes might have enabled it to make a sensation: but today we are only too painfully familiar with the horrors of blood and agony and desolation which follow in the train of war. And while it is very nearly impossible for any serious novel of the present day to ignore the World War, and while it is well that we should not be permitted to forget, if we would, the heroism and the suffering of those who paid the price of our freedom and our security, it is difficult not to turn aside with a shudder of repugnance from minute descriptions of other conflicts, whether real or imaginary. And in this novel we are not held by any particular interest in the fate of individual characters. Isaac Goldberg, one of the two translators of the novel and the writer of the "Introduction," is right when he states that "either the author inclines to caricature or to idealisation"—though we should be inclined to call it sentimentalisation. The chapter describing Chispas's flight through the forest, his loss of direction and his terrible death is extremely well done, but in Chispas as an individual the reader has no interest. Roberto's death upon the battlefield and the finding of his body by Doctor Miranda is also admirably done; but one does not care very much what happens to the sentimental youth who has been vacillating between two young women and whose will and desires alike seem to be most unstable.

The picture of the intrigues which were set to work to bring about the downfall of General Ronderos is detailed and interesting, giving, as it does, an admirable illustration of the conditions and types which have caused South American republics and revolutions to be closely associated. Against these conditions, as much almost as against the cruelty and wreckage of a useless, deliberately provoked war, the book is a protest. There are in it some charming as well as some impressive and some terrible descriptions, and here and there a touch of real tenderness or beauty, while the sketch of the social life of Bogota gives one an interesting glimpse of a society unlike our own. The novel is written with vigor, and it is emphatic in its denunciation of those demagogues who, "silently but tenaciously . . . roused the brutal instincts, the savage passions, that sleep in the soul of the people," telling them that they had been deceived and robbed, inciting them to assassination and rapine. The length of the book gives the author plenty of space in which to show us all this, to let us see the first tiny cloud, the gathering and the outbreak of the storm which brings ruin and desolation to so many formerly happy homes.

WHAT DOES YOUR MIRROR REVEAL ?

When a growing girl becomes pale, complains of exhaustion dizzy spells, headaches and stomach trouble, she should know these are evidences of anaemia or bloodlessness. A glance in the mirror will tell the story. There is immediate need for a tonic, a builder that will so completely restore the missing qualities to the blood that every part of the body will share in the benefit.

A good example of the result of wise treatment in a case of this kind is the story of Miss Catherine Maud Dias, a young lady residing at "The Zea," Flower Road, Colombo, Ceylon.

"About twelve months ago I broke down in health and became very weak and thin," she says. "I was troubled with a constant tiredness did not want anything to eat; what food I took gave me acute indigestion.

"It was a trouble to get through the day, my back ached, and my legs and feet seemed weighted with lead. I suffered terribly with headaches, my nerves were jumpy and I became very pale, my eyes were sunken with deep dark rings underneath, and horrible spots floated ever before me I suffered much from pains in the back and sides. It was impossible to sleep at night, and bad dreams frightened me a great deal. Other irregularities of health added to the pain and despondency I suffered.

"Then a friend recommended me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I followed this advice, and soon after starting the treatment was surprised and delighted to find a marked improvement. My appetite increased and I was again able to enjoy meals free from those dreadful indigestion pains. Regularity returned; all the aches in my back and sides vanished, and as I continued with the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I regained my lost weight and colour. Sleep came to me easily and no bad dreams disturbed me. I awoke in the mornings rested and fresh as the new blood began to permeate my whole system. In a very short time—after suffering so many months—all traces of anaemia left me. I am now strong and well. Thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills my cure is complete."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all druggists, or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, at $1.50 per bottle, $8/- for 6 bottles, post free.

WINGS OF THE WIND

Wings of the Wind. By Credo Harris. Small, Maynard and Co.

When Jack Bronx came back from France he felt that he had lived an entire life time within the period of eighteen months. He had returned with "jumpy nerves," and was generally out of tune with what seemed to him the drab routine of everyday civilian existence. His father and mother were a good deal worried about him, and, being rich as well as devoted parents, they sent him for a cruise on board their schooner yacht, the Whim. With him went his friend and chum, Tommy Davis, also formerly of the A. E. F. And, of course, they sailed straight into romance.

It all began when at Key West they encountered an odd little old gentleman, Monsieur Dragot, who told them he had a commission from Azuria, a kingdom which was not, as he hastened to explain, on any of the ordinary maps. Later he confided to them that the object of his mission was nothing less than the finding of the Princess of Azuria, kidnapped some twenty years before, when she was only 3 years old, and now the rightful sovereign of the kingdom of which her mother was acting Regent. Jack and Tommy agreed to take Monsieur Dragot with them to Havana, and it was in a restaurant in the Cuban city that Jack was entranced by the sight of a marvelously beautiful young girl, dining alone with an elderly man for whom he instantly felt an intense antipathy. This antipathy was not lessened when he perceived that the beautiful girl was afraid of the elderly man, and his interest was still further increased when she silently appealed to him for help and managed to scribble a message on a bit of paper. As might be expected, she was none other than the long lost Princess of Azuria. Jack and his friends did not know this, however, when they decided to rescue her and set out in pursuit of the yacht in which the elderly man had carried her off. They had many adventures among the Ten Thousand Islands off the coast of Southwestern Florida and on the mainland before they succeeded in freeing the Princess. The tale ends in the usual manner.

Viscount Bryce Tells The U.S.A. About Ireland

"The really important thing is that Americans should understand that the question of self-government for Ireland, whatever form it may take, is no longer a question between the two islands, as it was fifty years ago, but a question between two sections of the Irish people—one much larger than the other, but each embittered by the strife of the 34 years that have passed since 1886."

—VISCOUNT BRYCE.

Viscount Bryce, the author of "The American Commonwealth," the former Ambassador in Washington, seeks to remove the chief cause of Anglo-American misunderstanding, the Irish question, by a notable article in the American Supplement to the Times.

"His exposition of the attitude of the people of Great Britain to the people of Ireland is a lucid and impartial document, and his appeal to the sense of justice and innate good sense of Americans will gain strength from the affectionate respect in which he is regarded on the other side of the Atlantic," says the Times.

WHAT AMERICA BELIEVES

"What is the general belief in America regarding the relations of the people of Great Britain to the people of Ireland, and how far is that belief correct?" asks Lord Bryce.

"England is constantly represented to the American people as the oppressor of Ireland. They are told to think of the English as a harsh and selfish nation, unfaithful to its own traditions of freedom, treating unhappy Ireland, of whose miseries it was the cause, with a cruelty such as Russia showed to Poland and Austria used to show to Italy. The Irish people are represented as a practically united nation, differing in race and religion from the English, cherishing memories of former greatness, and demanding with a single voice to be delivered from an alien yoke.

THE FACTS

"These two pictures never were true. Ireland, doubtless, did receive in former days much hard treatment from England, as, indeed, every country was in times past ill-treated by those who had conquered it. But for the last seven centuries Ireland has never been a united country as against England, for there has been in Ireland a pro-English section, larger or smaller from time to time, but always important. The time when Ireland came nearest to speaking with one voice was in 1780—the time of the Irish Volunteers, when the Protestant and Anglo-Irish section of the nation—then, as now, a minority—received the sympathy of the then unenfranchised Roman Catholics in their successful demand for the abolition of an English authority in which Ireland was not represented.

"It is nevertheless true that, although the Irish people were never united in antagonism to England, the English people as a whole did for more than sixty years after the Union of the Kingdoms, in 1800, reject the demands put forward on behalf of the majority of the people by Daniel O'Connell and other Irish leaders down to Parnell for a measure of wide self-government. During those years the English insisted on treating Ireland as part of the United Kingdom, saying that as the Irish people, Protestants and Catholics (after 1829) alike, were represented in the British Parliament with an equal suffrage and a representation (in later years) in excess of the proportion of the population, they ought to be contented therewith. In this sense, then, although the Irish people were not united in their demand for self-government there was an antagonism between the two islands, not merely because there were unredressed grievances (down to 1869 regarding the Church, and to 1881 regarding the land), but also because the English were practically united in their refusal to Ireland of the special treatment which many of her spokesmen demanded, and which most of us now think ought to have been given.

IT ENDED IN 1886

"That state of things ended in 1886. That year was a turning-point of vital significance in the relations of the two islands, and it is this significance which does not appear to be understood in America.

"In 1886 Mr. Gladstone, convinced that the claim for Home Rule, which had at the election of 1885 received the support of a large majority of Irish voters, was a just claim and ought to be granted, induced his party to adopt the policy of Home Rule. Believing that both countries would fare better if self-government were granted to Ireland, because peace and good will would grow up between them, he brought in a Home Rule Bill, which, however, failed to pass.

"In 1893 he brought in a second Bill, which passed the House of Commons but was rejected in the House of Lords. His party continued to proclaim Home Rule as their deliberate and settled policy, and it was one of his greatest services to both countries that by that policy the opposition between the two peoples was brought to an end, because at least half of the English people and much more than half of the Scottish people had taken their stand beside the majority of the Irish people in the demand for Home Rule.

HOME RULE PASSED

"In 1914 the then Liberal Prime Minister succeeded in passing a Home Rule Bill, which is now on the Statute Book. Its operation was postponed because at the very moment of its passing the war broke out, and it appeared impossible during the war to introduce some amendments which the Bill was felt to require. However, the fact remains that in 1914 a decision, never since reversed, was given by the British Parliament in favor of Home Rule. If the Act has not yet taken place, it is for a reason which I must now explain.

THE IRISH WHO WON'T

"A section of the Irish people, which is roughly estimated at one-fourth, has steadily objected to Home Rule, and that part of this section which dwells in the north-eastern countries has declared that if Home Rule were imposed upon them they would resist it by force of arms. This section is mainly, but not entirely, Protestant—for in Ireland the dividing line between the advocates and opponents of Home Rule does not altogether correspond with distinctions either of race or of religion. There are plenty of Home Rule Protestants of English stock, and some anti-Home Rulers who are Catholic and of Celtic stock.

"Now it is the resistance of this one-fourth that has delayed the settlement of the Home Rule question," adds Lord Bryce. "How far they are justified in their opposition, how far the English Government was justified in allowing itself to be alarmed by their threats of forcible resistance—upon these points, as upon the conduct of the British Government generally, I say nothing here, though I have often expressed my opinion in Parliament.

"Let me repeat once more that it is in the divisions within Ireland itself, not in my want of good will on England's part, that there lies the obstacle—and practically the only obstacle—which still delays that peaceful settlement which the British democracy sincerely desire."

Britain Gets Report From Soviet Russia

Labor Delegates, Returned To London, Contradict Stories Of Starvation

London, August 30.—The final report of the British labor delegation which went to Russia last May has been published here recently. The report, in substance, follows:

"We did not see the people of Russia falling dead in the streets of starvation, nor did we witness any interferences with the religious life of the people there. There is no evidence of extra ordinary luxury among the leading commissars and there is no nationalisation of women or children. We were struck by the enlightened policy which has been adopted toward children.

"Broadly speaking there is a single standard of living in Russia, and the glaring inequalities of fortune which form so great a scandal in capitalist countries exists no longer.

"In Russia personal freedom, together with freedom of speech and propaganda are severely repressed, in case they are supposed to be threats against the Soviet regime. Labor power is dealt with more and more on disciplinary principles, trade unions being increasingly well controlled by centralised councils of trade unions which are more and more amenable to the influence of a council of national economy.

"The co-operative movement instead of being an institution for a limited circle has become a definite part of a state machinery. The dominance of the Communist Party has not been accepted in practice but is defended as something which though not yet written into the constitution is an essential part of the working of the Soviet institution under the present transitory conditions.

"The country population has not been won over to Socialism nor to anything more radical than passive acceptance of the Soviet Regime. All deserters from work, with the object of obtaining higher pay, have been arrested by soldiers. The nationalisation of land has not been achieved except in name. Piece work or payment by result has been reintroduced and has resulted in increased production.

'FIRST AID' LIQUOR CUT OFF

New Rule Bars Stimulants For All Injured In Factories

Washington, July 24.—Under a ruling by William M. Williams, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, workmen in factories and industry generally must not be furnished with a drink of whisky as a "first aid" treatment.

Secretary Houston, of the Treasury Department, has approved the new ruling, which repeals Section 74, Regulations 60, authorising procurement of liquors for us in "first aid" treatment at manufacturing industrial and other establishments hitherto.

The regulation now reads as follows:

"On and after the effective date of these regulations no permit will be issued to any person authorising the use of intoxicating liquor in first-aid treatment at manufacturing, industrial and other establishments, as provided by Section 74 of Regulation 60.

"Any person to whom such a permit has previously been issued may, prior to the expiration of the present calendar year, use any liquor heretofore procured by him under authority thereof for the purpose and at the establishment indicated in said permit, upon compliance with the requirements of the section above mentioned.

"Such person will not, however, be permitted to procure further supplies of intoxicating liquor for such purposes, and the Director will refuse to approve any application for permit to purchase Form 1,410 filed hereafter by such person. When the liquor now in the possession of such permittee has been disposed of as above provided, his permit shall be inoperative."

It has been the custom of the attendant surgeons at "first aid" stations at all industrial establishments to administer liquor in medicinal quantities as a temporary stimulant to men or women who have been injured while at work and who are awaiting transportation to the nearest hospital. Hereafter the patient must wait without a stimulant until the ambulance arrive to take him to a hospital.

SAYS JAPAN IS PREPARING COUP

Vladivostok Paper Says Evacuation Of Trans-Baikal Will Be Followed By Action

DOUBTS TOKIO'S MOTIVES

Repeats Uchida's Statement That Armistice Is Merely A Tactical Step

Tokio, September 2.—"Under the cover of the evacuation of the Japanese troops from Siberia, the Japanese militarists are preparing for a new and more powerful offensive in Siberia. We do not believe in the sincerity of the Japanese when they declare their willingness to establish peace and order in the Far East." This is the opinion of the oldest daily paper in Vladivostok, the Dalnevostochneie Obozrenie, or The Far Eastern Review.

"The armistice entered into by the Japanese Command and the Verdhne-Udinsk Government began on July 18 and will last during the time of the negotiations between the delegates of the Far Eastern groups. Semenoff has also agreed to this armistice. The Japanese military authorities on their part agreed to guarantee the execution of the conditions of the armistice. Later came the news of the resignation of the Verdhne-Udinsk Minister of Foreign Affairs, Krasnoschekov. This, if true, is apparently connected with the negotiations for the armistice. In arranging the armistice the first step for the unification of the Far East was made. This must be followed by another—no less important—the convocation of a conference of representatives of the governments of the Far East.

TRANS-BAIKALIA PEACEFUL

"Trans-Baikalia has changed from an armed camp to a peaceful place, and now we can see a vision of a coming thorough liquidation of the civil war and a return to peace and industry. But the outlook is not so simple as it appears; life does not move in the ways of logic and common sense; this has been proved only too often by the events of the last few years.

"The real basis of peace in the Far East is not the armistice, which was comparatively simple to arrange, but in the negotiations that must now be carried on between the warring factions. And further the results of these negotiations will depend largely on the policy that Japan will take in Siberia. It is indisputable that Semenoff and his Government in such negotiations will take the stand dictated by Japan. If Japan's attitude shall be one of enmity and irreconcilability to Vladivostck, Blagovestchensk and Verdhne-Udinsk, it is evident that all efforts to achieve unity for Far Eastern Russia will be cut short under one pretext or another. In such an event the "Trans-Baikal screw," as the Russians now call the Semenoff forces supported by Japan, will be applied again and the question of uniting the provinces will be left unsolved.

CAN'T FORETELL POLICY

"What Japan's policy in the near future is likely to be it is impossible to tell, for even among so-called responsible circles in Japan there appears to be no unity of purpose. If Japan were to follow the voice of her liberal press and her parliamentary majority she would surely make an end to Semenoff and do what she could to insure the reunion of the Far Eastern Russian provinces. But if she blindly follows her militarist party, then the armistice concluded on the Yblenevy Mountains in Za-Baikal will be only a temporary truce after which the policy of occupation urged by the militarist party will be followed to its full extent. Of the extent of this policy, we can judge by the utterance of the pro-Japanese paper recently established here, The Ruasky Golos, which openly advocates inviting of the Japanese to become the 'protectors of the Russian Far East.'

"In one of the secret sessions during the recent sitting of the Imperial Diet of Japan, Viscount Uchida, the Foreign Minister, in full accord with the Minister of War, General Tanaka, made the declaration that the evacuation of the Japanese troops from the Trans-Baikal area must be regarded as merely a tactical step. For, Viscount Uchida, said, in the event that the status quo in Trans-Baikalia by Krasnochekov or by the Amur Partisans, and also in the event that the number of Partisans in Trans-Baikalia is increased by the incoming of Partisans from the neutral zones, Japan will send into Trans-Baikalia eight divisons and will occupy the whole of Trans-Baikalia and the Irkutsk district, including the rich coal district of Cherekhovo.

EASY TO FIND AN EXCUSE

"Viscount Uchida considers this the best way out. It will not be difficult for Japan to find violations of the status quo. It is only necessary to recall how the Japanese Command explained its coup of April 4 and 5. The failure of the responsibilities taken on itself by the Verdhne-Udinsk Government may be already at hand, if the Japanese military authorities are looking for an excuse. They may take the statement, based on information 'from a certain foreign officer,' that the Soviet forces have already crossed the Selenga River and have appeared in the district of Gongeta station. This has caused our Japanese contemporary in Vladivostok, the Vladivo Nippo, which is always well informed in advance of the Japanese moves, to take the occasion for saying that 'this unexpected appearance of the Soviet troops has uncovered for us the real object of the Soviet and the Verdhne-Udinsk Governments.' This paper goes on to say that the unification of the Far East of Russia is an impossibility.

"If Japan follows the lead to Viscount Uchida and General Tanaka, who have the support of the militarist party, it is quite evident that this armistice will have no real value at all. It will only serve the purpose that Viscount Uchida ascribed to it in the Diet, as a tactical move in preparation for a new onslaught on Siberia."

Increase In London's Small Smart Shops

London, July 24.—The East End is rapidly becoming a strong rival of the West End in the number of smart little shops in which "exclusive dresses and hats" can be bought. These millinery and dressmakers' shops are springing up especially along Whitechapel, Mile end Road and Commercial Road. In almost every block is found a window with a fancy name in glittering letters and containing artistically arranged, a few hats and blouses and little frocks the color scheme of which and also the model are truly captivating to the women.

The girls who opened these shops are said to be "graduates" of the West End houses of wide reputation, and most of them young Jewesses, who are very artistic in temperament. It seems that they are starting a new fashion which consists in the use of "daring but supremely right color schemes."

"PRICELESS"

is a popular way of describing anything which has proved to be of exceptional value, and may therefore be employed to describe that old and favourite preparation—Beecham's Pills. The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box" when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand's exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, September 8, states:

Exchange:—The London price of Silver has ruled rather unsteady during the week, after falling 1¼d. to 57⅝d. it went as high as 60⅜d. but today is down to 59½d. i.e. ⅝d. higher than last week closing price. Our rates for T.T. on London has followed silver and at the close is quoted 5s. 10½d. flat, with a weak tendency locally.

A fair amount of export paper was negotiated early in the week, but exports for which Shanghai is the center are very dull and the silk and tea seasons have been comparatively very poor. Up North large business in the export of wheat is reported but we understand it is being negotiated on a Gold Yen basis.

With tight money in the home markets, and in the absence of Gold cover in the shape of export paper, the Shanghai Exchange Banks show a disposition to become buyers rather than sellers of T.T. on London, at least for September-October delivery.

Local stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 32,480,000 a decrease of Tls. 280,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $24,840,000 an increase of $510,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 50,610,000.

Stock of silver on September 10, 1919, Taels 28,500,000.

Cox And Harding On The Big Issues

THE Literary Digest of July 31 carries an interesting and effective symposium of editorial views of the great contest between Governor Cox and Senator Harding for the Presidency. Governor Cox had not delivered his speech of acceptance at the time, so his side was somewhat at a disadvantage. However, his views were well enough known to enable The Digest to present them parallel with those of Senator Harding, the latter's expressions being taken from his speech of acceptance delivered July 22. Both candidates according to the Digest have decided to make the League of Nations and the Treaty of Peace the paramount issue. Says The Digest:

As a call to battle the Harding speech of acceptance naturally rings more loudly and clearly in Republican than Democratic ears. In the Senator's own State the Cleveland Plain Dealer (Dem.) says: "It is not a call to action, but an invitation to slumber." The speech suggests two things to the Philadelphia Record (Dem.): one is Oliver Wendell Holmes's katydid that "sayeth an undisputed thing in such a solemn way," and the other is the cautious sportsman who aimed to "hit it if it's a deer and miss it if it's a calf." But to a Republican paper like the Milwaukee Sentinel the utterance at Marion seems "a really powerful and moving address." "Senator Harding has risen to the occasion," Colonel Harvey tells us. "Senator Harding hits squarely," according to the New York Sun (Ind. Rep.). The Columbus Ohio State Journal (Rep.) calls the Harding speech "a message of peace, progress, and broad statesmanship." The St Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.) calls it "a satisfying presentation of personal views, worthy in its tone, its spirit, and its wisdom of the selected leader of a great party." Other Republican papers which find matter for criticism in parts of the address are willing to commend the speech as a whole. "In its broad significance it is an important state paper," concludes the Chicago Tribune. The Indianapolis Star likes its "air of sincerity and of modesty." In general, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger (Ind. Rep.), "it is a good speech which will equip the Republican champions with telling texts and winning arguments." A number of these Republican papers take delight in the Senator's condemnation of autocracy in government and his declaration of belief "in party government as distinguished from personal government." More than one Democratic editor, however, is in full accord with the Baltimore Sun (Ind.) when it says that what Mr. Harding really means is not party government, but "government by a little clique of United States Senators."

Aside from his declaration for party government and his exposition of the party attitude on the Treaty and the League, Senator Harding's speech of acceptance was largely confined to rephrasing planks of the Chicago platform and to assertions which do not involve marked division of sentiment between Republicans and Democrats. The quotations gathered together above show which utterances in the Marion speech indicate points of sharp divergence or of practical agreement as between the two candidates. It is evident that thus far at least the one real fighting issue is the League, and a Democratic paper, the Brooklyn Eagle, goes so far as to say for the opponents of Mr. Harding that with most of those portions of his speech of acceptance "which do not touch the Treaty issue, little fault will be found." Democratic papers which attack the Harding viewpoint believe that Cox is more definite and that he is in a stronger strategic position as far as the League is concerned. Republicans have expressed wonder whether Cox's real Treaty policy is to ratify the Treaty with such a reservation as the one quoted on this page or whether the reported agreement between him and President Wilson means that he would really like to force the Covenant through without change. Similarly, we find two interpretations of Senator Harding's attitude. Some hold that he means to kill the Treaty, others that his declarations at Marion leave the way open for its ratification with reservations. The Cleveland Plain Dealer (Dem.), for one, does not believe that the public can tell from this speech "whether the Senator, if elected President, will favor the Covenant with reservations, will urge the utter rejection of the Covenant in any form, or what he will do." The Philadelphia Record (Dem.) finds this part of the speech "diffuse and evasive" Yet while some consider the Senator's attitude on the League a straddle, observes the Louisville Courier - Journal (Dem.), many will find sufficient ground for concluding "that the speaker has stepped from the platform straddle of the dominant issue of the campaign and walked into the camp of Johnson's 'irreconcilables' and 'bitter-enders.'"

Vague as it finds Mr. Harding's suggestions about the "new relationship," the Springfield Republican (Ind.) holds that the speech of acceptance definitely "settles the question of the policy of the Republican party in regard to the Versailles Treaty"—

"It is a decision manifestly dictated by the Republican bitter-enders. . . . The success of Mr. Harding at the polls after the announcement of this program would be interpreted as a vindication of their position by all the Senators whose sole object has been to make an end of the League of Nations idea."

Another Independent daily friendly to the League of Nations condemns the Harding program as "impossible." Says the New York Evening Post:

"Senator Harding's program is nothing less than a repudiation of our professed ideals of international co-operation, for it repudiates the only method of giving them early and effective application. . . . . .

"Senator Harding's statement upon the central issue of the campaign. . . . will chill the spirit of the great body of independent voters who were awaiting his pronouncement and cause them to look to the acceptance speech of Governor Cox, to whom Mr. Harding has opened a great opportunity."

In an editorial entitled "Harding Scuttles the League," the New York Times (Dem.) calls attention to the number of eminent Republicans who want the League ratified with reservations, and asserts that the Senator "has given the Democrats a clear issue and a great opportunity"—

"It is no longer a question of balancing a set of Republican reservations to the Treaty against a Democratic set. The Republican candidate . . . is against the Treaty in any form; opposed to the League however amended. Mr. Harding has cleared the field for his opponents and given them a stronger cause and a favorable fighting-ground than they could have hoped for."

Turning now to the other side, we find the Harding speech of acceptance in its bearings on the League of Nations naturally received with the greatest enthusiasm from those papers which object most strongly to the League of Nations. Senator Harding and Senator Lodge, speaking at Marion, pronounced "a two-fold sentence of death" upon the Wilson Covenant, and, continues the Boston Transcript (Rep.), "the fulfilment of the two pledges there given by the Republican standard-bearer will mark the final obsequies of the supergovernment of Geneva and the formal resurrection and re-enforcement of the Hague Tribunal—the shining triumph of straight Americanism over crooked internationalism." The Pittsburg Gazette-Times (Rep.) believes that on this subject Senator Harding "expresses the sentiment of the American people as ascertained indubitably." Mr. Harding's refutation of the idea that America is dishonored "unless it enters the League as Wilson demands" is, according to the Chicago Tribune (Rep.), "complete and inspiring, and it is without bitterness." The New York Sun (Ind. Rep.) likes the way he seizes the League issue "by the throat." The St. Paul Pioneer Press (Ind. Rep.) feels confident that the majority of the American people will approve the Republican candidate's "pledge that a Republican President and Senate will promptly restore former peace without shunning a single responsibility of the Republic, without perilling the freedom, independence, and self-reliance of the nation, and without weakening, jeopardising, the fine relationship in which America stands with the rest of the world." And we read in the Baltimore American (Rep.):

"The Republican candidate stands for the wide, humane interests that would bind all in the bonds of a deeper and profounder fellowship than a tenth article of a covenant backed by bristling bayonets can possibly provide."

But it must be recorded that there are Republican papers more friendly to the League that frankly express their disappointment. As the Boston Herald (Ind. Rep.) voices its feeling: "It is disappointing not to have a clear and forward-looking statement on the subject which both sides proclaim with their lips as the leading issue of the campaign." The Philadelphia Public Ledger admits that it received "a cold douche of disappointment" on reading the Senator's views on the Treaty. "Senator Harding apparently has decided not only to stand on the League plank adopted by the Chicago convention for the avowed purpose of giving Johnson and his rebel crowd no plausible excuse for bolting, but has also decided to stand all over it—probably for the same reason." This independent paper with Republican leanings thinks that Senator Harding is apparently adopting the policy of the Knox resolution. And "such a policy will be a disappointment to millions of good Republicans, who feel that the League of Nations, properly safeguarded, offers a practical chance to diminish at least the dangers of war."

HARDING — COX

PEACE, THE TREATY, AND THE LEAGUE

"I promise you formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican Congress can pass its declaration for a Republican Executive to sign. Then we may turn to our readjustment at home and proceed deliberately and reflectively to that hoped-for world-relationship which shall satisfy both conscience and aspirations and still hold us free from menacing involvement."

"With a Senate advising as the Constitution contemplates, I would hopefully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a willing participant in the consecration of nations to a new relationship, to commit the moral forces of the world, America included, to peace and international justice, still leaving America free, independent, and self-reliant, but offering friendship to all the world."

"I am not saying that the League is perfect. No human document is. As you already know, I have suggested two reservations myself, but there must be no reservation that will nullify the Treaty."

"It will, of course, be understood that in carrying out the purpose of the League, the Government of the United States must at all times act in strict harmony with the terms and intent of the United States Constitution, which can not in any way be altered by the treaty-making power."

LABOR

"I wish the higher wage to abide, on one explicit condition—that the wage-earner will give full return for the wage received. It is the best assurance we can have for a reduced cost of living."

"The insistent call is for labor, management, and capital to reach an understanding."

"We do not oppose but approve collective bargaining, because that is an outstanding right, but we are unalterably insistent that its exercise must not destroy the equally sacred right of the individual in his necessary pursuit of livelihood. Any American has the right to quit his employment, so has every American the right to seek employment."

"The strike against the Government is properly denied, for Government service involves none of the elements of profit which relate to competitive enterprise."

"Restriction of production, either by combination to uphold prices or by joining of hands to increase personal profit, must be characterised as a type of savagery."

"There is, however, as clearly marked as a noonday sun, a ground which is both fair to capital and labor. I have tried to occupy this ground, and I think I am perfectly safe in submitting the case to both capital and labor. Both should follow the Golden Rule, and we should deal justice with an even hand."

"There should be created a commission which, by direction of the President, would make a careful examination of the facts bearing on industrial disputes which affect interstate commerce. It should report the facts but submit no conclusion. Upon the evidence public opinion will be formed. It can be depended upon to be fair, and it will always be dominant."

TAXATION, GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES, AND FINANCE

"We will attempt intelligent and courageous deflation, and strike at government borrowing which enlarges the evil, and we will attack high cost of government with every energy and facility which attend Republican capacity."

"I believe this Government should make its Liberty and Victory bonds worth all that its patriotic citizens paid in purchasing them."

"I believe the tax burdens imposed for the war-emergency must be revised to the needs of peace and in the interest of equity in distribution of the burden."

"I believe the budget system will effect a necessary, helpful reformation and reveal business methods to government business,

"I believe that the high cost of living is largely due to too many turnovers. Excess profit takes its toll at each turn. By the time the article reaches the consumer the toll has been paid several times. The Federal Government must take a vital interest in the broad subject of marketing, and the number of turnovers should be cut down. Of course, funds to support the Government must be raised."

"I favor as a means to this end an excess-profits tax and a 1 to 1½ percent tax on business of growing concerns. I believe in retaining the income tax, with heavy impost upon large incomes."

"The Federal inheritance tax should be given up as soon as possible."

"I believe that a modern budget system is necessary."

PROHIBITION

"I believe in law enforcement. If elected I mean to be a Constitutional President, and it is impossible to ignore the Constitution, unthinkable to evade the law, when our every committal is to orderly government. People ever will differ about the wisdom of the enactment of a law—there is divided opinion respecting the Eighteenth Amendment and the laws enacted to make it operative—but there can be no difference of opinion about honest law-enforcement."

"Modification or repeal is the right of a free people whenever the deliberate and intelligent public sentiment commands, but perversion and evasion mark the paths to the failure of government itself."

"Prohibition is ordered by Constitutional provision and by Federal statute. The President of the United States takes oath to support both. It has never been my habit to violate my oath, and an officer who does not enforce the law is worse than the man who breaks it. We accept both the Constitution and the statutes as the will of the majority. I represent the Jeffersonian principle that the majority can do as it will regarding the prohibition question. They may leave it on the statutebook or may repeal it, but as long as I am a public officer I shall accept what is as the will of the majority."

SUFFRAGE

"By party edict, by my recorded vote, by personal conviction I am committed to this measure of justice. It is my earnest hope, my sincere desire that the one State vote be quickly recorded in the affirmation of the right of equal suffrage."

"Every State and country which has tried woman suffrage has given evidence that woman voters have added to the sum total of good results. The time for granting political freedom to women of the entire United States is now here."

THE FARMERS

"I hold that farmers should not only be permitted but encouraged to join in co-operative association to reap the just measure of reward merited by their arduous toil. . . . Upon such association and co-operation should be laid only such restrictions as will prevent arbitrary control of our food supply and the fixing of extortionate prices upon it.

"Governmental surveys should be made in order that there might be placed in the public mind a proper understanding of the symptoms of decay and deterioration in rural life."

"I think it is time to draft a man who has followed the plow and knows the farming game as Secretary of Agriculture. . . . I am going to appoint a dirt farmer, one who has worked the dirt and knows it."

THE TARIFF

"I believe in the protective-tariff policy, and know we will be calling for its saving Americanism again."

"I have always been a believer in tariff for revenue, but we can not afford to lose the world trade by building a barrier around business that will cut us off from this trade."

FRENCH LOTTERY BONDS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—In December last the Banque Industrielle de Chine inserted an advertisement in THE CHINA PRESS inviting subscriptions to the new French Government Loan (Lottery Bonds, 5 percent 1920). In connection with these bonds there were to be quarterly drawings, at each of which the first prize was to be one million francs.

Although the first quarterly drawing took place last March, I have failed to find in THE CHINA PRESS or any of its contemporaries a list of winning numbers at this or the subsequent drawing. There will be another drawing this month.

In common with other investors with whom I have talked the matter over, I feel that the French bank should be called upon to furnish this very essential information.

I would like to add that investors in the first issue of Lottery Bonds were not particularly pleased with the action of the French Government in issuing a further loan (lottery bonds), on very much more favorable terms, as soon as subscriptions to the first issue were complete. Yours, etc.,

"12.000 FRANCS."

THE GREAT STATESMAN

"The course of a great statesman resembles that of navigable rivers, avoiding immovable obstacles with noble bends of concession, seeking the broad levels of opinion on which men soonest settle and longest dwell, following and marking the almost imperceptible slopes of national tendency, yet always aiming at direct advances, always recruiting from sources nearer heaven, and sometimes bursting open paths of progress and fruitful human commerce through what seem the eternal barriers of both. It is loyalty to great ends that we demand in public men and not sameness of policy, or conscientious persistency in what is impracticable."

S. J. Deeks, playing cricket some time ago, allowed his eye to gaze upon some of the beauties of nature instead of the flight of the ball, and so stopped one of Johnny Robertson's swerving deliveries with his leg in the region of the knee cap. Today he is still in bed having hot compresses continually applied to his wound. I found him full of chat and charm, but overwhelmed with disappointment at not being in the running for the big interport game. He was simply wallowing in light literature. His friends evidently gauge his literary taste.

In his reading matter I could see, "Chips," "Comic Cuts," "The Blood Stained Knife," (one of the Deadwood Dick Series). "La Vogue" and "Little Red Riding Hood." You won't believe this last, but it's true, nevertheless, and S. J. tells me it is a blankety-blank-blithering story. He is going to see the sender as soon as his gamey leg permits.

LINES FROM LETTERS

Dear Bill, Many of the wives, who went away for the summer, are now coming back to find several layers of unclean dishes, some of them unbroken, the family canary reclining gracefully inside the next door cat, and the husband prostrate on a couch, wondering what he would have had for dinner if he had had one. That, Bill, is the usual result of leaving a man to look after the place.

Well, Bill, I hear that your "Cheese and Kisses" has just left you, and here is a word or two of advice to help you to overcome the attacks of hunger and anything else that might turn up.

Now to cook your breakfast: Decant a few handsful, of oatmeal in the porringer. Let it simmer for a few hours, add some salt and then—and then give it to the cat. Then take a length of bacon place it face downwards in the frying-pan, a little to the left. If while cooking it should curl up at the end hold it down with the first and third finger. Next take a brace of eggs, bite off the blunt ends, and turn them inside out, allowing the reluctant tacky mass to become a sticky mess by letting the two eggs sit down side by side in the pan. Stir the whole with a wooden spoon while cooking. When cooked place on a plate, tie with blue ribbon and when cooled you will be able to wear the result as a charm on your watch chain.

For dinner you can have a dish of peas and lamb. Don't try to cook the peas; it can't be done; and as for split peas they are out of the question as the union of split-pea-splitters has gone on strike because they are in the soup. When ready telephone the club, and order a nice little dinner there. Give the lamb and peas to the rats and you will have no further trouble from them, neither will you need your rat trap. But after all I think it would be better for you to shut up the house, burn it, collect the insurance money, go to Mexico, run for president and then run for your life. Cheerio, Bill.

Yours, Alf.

Poles Ripe For Revolution Trotsky Believes

(The following interview with Trotsky was granted to a special correspondent of the Manchester Guardian just before the Polish offensive began. The correspondent has just returned to London and published the interview.)

London, July 22.—Leon Trotsky for a considerable time has given no interviews to newspaper correspondents. As Military and Naval Commissary he combines the posts of War Minister and First Lord of the Admiralty, and now, during the absence of Krassin, he has added to these the post of Commissar or Minister of Ways of Communication, which in the the present condition of transport is perhaps the most difficult post in the Soviet Republic. The farthest he has been willing to go in giving interviews in either Russian or the foreign press is to dictate answers to definite questions submitted on paper.

I consequently considered myself very lucky when, through a mutual friend, I was able to arrange a regular interview with him. I saw him in the Commissariat for Ways of Communication. In the outer office were a strange group of officials—sailors from the Baltic in uniform, an elderly civil servant of the old Ministry and a couple of young officers. Trotsky was sitting at Krassin's table in the inner office. Unlike Lenin, who, in spite of the bullet in him, seems but little changed, he has aged very much during the last year. His great mass of dark hair has turned quite gray. He had found a toy on Krassin's table, a little sand-glass, an instrument of torture for longwinded visitors struggling to get through their conversation before the last sand has run.

He tapped the sand-glass threateningly when I asked him about the obvious analogy between the successive defeats of Kolchak, Judenitch and Denikin. "But that is old history," he said, "and you will find what you want to know about it in my report to the last All-Russian Assembly."

"Yes," I said, "I have read that report, but there is one thing missing from it. In all those defeats there was an immediate breakup in the rear following the first serious setback on the front. Yet when you come to fight the Esthonians, and they, too,' were forced back, their retirement was not followed by any troubles in their rear. Do you believe that the same formula that held good in the civil wars of the Revolution, when Russians were fighting Russians, will hold good when, in the case of an attack by Poland, Russians will be fighting Poles and nationalist feelings will be engaged, quite apart from the struggle between political ideas which characterised the civil war?"

At this point, becoming interested, he became a little more friendly, and put the sand-glass away. He said: "I believe the formula will hold good absolutely, and that nationalist feeling will in the end be swamped by the political struggle inside the nation that is fighting us."

"So that here also one may say that a counter-revolutionary force, even if a national unity would begin by gaining successes, that its use of these successes would illustrate its counter-revolutionary character, would create divisions within itself which, becoming pronounced the moment these successes began to be liquidated would lead to catastrophic collapse from within?"

"Certainly. The existence of strong national feeling postpones, retards, but does not prevent the process. Esthonia stopped fighting in time. Who knows what would have happened if she had been forced to go on fighting for another six months? Remember that there also they have to shoot their Bolsheviks, that their Trade Unions Council expressed itself in favor of a Soviet government, and that they thereupon shot 26 and deported about a hundred of the delegates, and that, notwithstanding a second congress, undeterred, adopted a similar resolution. The process was already clearly visible. Yet consider the position of the present Esthonian Government fairly stable, because they have a very small proletariat and a very large agricultural population of small farmers.

"But this does not apply to Poland at all. There they have a very large, thoroughly revolutionary proletariat, and the bulk of the peasant population is similarly revolutionary on account of the enormous size of the big estates. It is, as it were, a proletarianised peasantry. Consequently I am absolutely convinced that, though by a sudden blow they might break through and seize, for example, Smolensk, or Kieff, that success would be the first term in a formula which would eventually be written out in full and carried to its logical conclusion in a complete collapse of the Polish Government and a victorious Polish revolution.

"National feeling will merely act as a brake on the process, but in the case of Poland a very slight one. A few months should see the beginning of the end, in case they insist on real war. Hitherto, as you know, there has been no real war, and they describe the capture of a party of scouts as a glorious victory of Polish arms. The fact that they do this shows in itself how weak must be their position at home."

BIGGEST PIECE OF JADE

It Is In The Natural History Museum As Large As Plymouth Rock

With jade for ornaments increasing in price from five to six times what it was previous to the great war, it is interesting to know that the largest known block of jade in existence is in the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. The big stone looks to the average observer to be about as large as that famous piece of rock they keep under an elaborate arch at Plymouth, Mass., the famous Plymouth Rock upon which the Pilgrims landed. Its actual size is seven feet in length by four in width and its weight is three tons.

The Museum's block of jade does not look unlike the Plymouth Rock, for while jade always suggests a beautifully polished green, or perhaps white stone, this, being in the rough, looks very much like any other boulder.

While the big piece of jade is one of the Museum's great curiosities it is not, as might be supposed, in a conspicuous place, say in the big central hall of the Museum on the main floor but tucked away in a far corner of South Sea Hall on the fourth floor. This is because it is used as a part of an anthropological exhibit and on it is poised a Maori warrior, life size, in an attitude suggestive of a war dance, with a knife poised in an upraised hand.

The warrior is an interesting person himself. He is in native costume, which consists of tattooing on the face and the upper part of the legs and a breech cloth. The model was cast from life. The original was Hautuoterangi, a Maori dancer, who was one of a troupe brought to this country a few years ago to perform at the Hippodrome. The statue was the work of Sigurd Neandross, and in the difficult pose in which it is done is considered one of the finest and most realistic figures of this kind in the Museum.

Monsieur Hautuoterangi is poised upon the block of jade because that stone is found in very considerable quantities in New Zealand and is prized by the Maoris both as an article of value and also as lucky stone. Besides making ornaments and charms of the jade, the Maori carved axe-shaped implements from it, drilled at the upper ends, and carried by their chiefs as badges of office.

The greater part of New Zealand jade is found on the western coast of South Island in boulders which usually appear in mountain streams. This big block of jade was found on South Island in 1902. It is of the green variety, none of the white jade being found in New Zealand, and the interior ranges from apple green to the richest tones of emerald. The outer surfaces are subject to change and like this great boulder are a subtranslucent brown or yellow brown.
